Abstract

This study aims to determine the reasons for choosing and staying in the customs broker profession. The researchers used an interview method as an instrument in the data gathering. The informants of the study were the 11 Licensed Customs Brokers who are graduates of John B. Lacson Foundation Maritime University-Molo, Inc. and are currently in the practice of the profession. The study revealed that most of the informants are "Influenced by others" for choosing customs broker as a profession and "To feed the mind with complete knowledge" is the reason why they stay in the profession.
