Abstract

This research conducted last April 2009 pursued the qualitative approach to determine the modern cuisines of Emilion Restaurant. The main focus of the research was the modern cuisines that the restaurant offers as well as the response of the establishment personnel and the feedback of the customers. The researchers also tried to relate these offers to the Tourism Industry. Utilizing semi-structured interviews, the researchers were able to gather data from the respondents about their experiences with the restaurant's cuisines. The respondents of this study were the guests and personnel of the restaurant. Method used involves taste analysis, relating, sorting, and interviews. Findings showed that the establishment has mere relationship to the Tourism Industry in such ways that is in regards with foods.
